Permanent Make-up

Look good 24 hours a day.

Permanent Make-up, also referred to as micro pigmentation, or colour implants is a process whereby pigments are implanted beneath the skin. A specialised hand held machine implants coloured pigment just below the surface of the skin while it is numb. Topical anaesthetic is used to numb the area and minimise discomfort. As it is not as deep as a tattoo it lasts between 3 to 5 years.

The technique has been medically developed for a safe permanent application. The pigments used have been specially formulated for cosmetic application.

Allergic reactions are rare. It will not run, smudge or wear off so reapplying is eliminated. Retain a fresh appearance day and night.

Permanent make-up can be applied to eyes and lips for a fuller, youthful and more vibrant look.

After Care

The first 5 days requires the treatment area to be kept moist with either Bepanthen cream or Broliene eye ointment, available at most pharmacies.

After 4 days there may be some exfoliation or flaking occur on the treated area, which is quite normal.

To complete the treatment a second visit is required in 4 weeks (this is included in the price). Without the second visit the success of the treatment is diminished.
